Physical Therapy

Physical therapists work with children to treat injuries, or disorders that affect their musculoskeletal function and development and determine specific goals for therapy. Individualized exercise and manual therapies are used to achieve those goals.

Occupational Therapy

Occupational therapists treat patients with conditions that affect social function and activities of daily living. Sensory integration, functional activities, and social skills training helps children develop the skills needed to thrive in school, home and play.

Speech & Feeding Therapy

Speech-language pathologists treat conditions and disorders that affect speech, communication, feeding, and swallowing. They help children with communication delays through development of oral motor skills and language comprehension.

ABA/Behavior Therapy

Applied Behavior Analysis, or ABA Therapy, is designed to help children on the Autism spectrum increase social behaviors and decrease challenging behaviors and barriers to learning.

Psychological Testing

We offer in-house psychological evaluations for children who have been diagnosed or are suspected to have Autism Spectrum Disorder.

Welcome Newcomers and Chamber Members:

Celebrating 100 Years!

The Rowan Chamber of Commerce is celebrating its 100th Anniversary this year and we will be lifting up long-term businesses in our community all year long!

STEVE FISHER

This publication is one of the best resources for supporting our local business community. It's our 2025 Membership Directory and Talent Attraction Guide.

The 2025 Directory is organized into three main sections:

1. Talent Attraction Guide
2. Alphabetical list of Members
3. Business Category list of Members

The Talent Attraction Guide is specifically designed to provide valuable information which will help you relocate successfully to our community. There are numerous opportunities for you to get involved in the Chamber.

The Chamber has peer-to-peer networks like the Young Professionals, Women in Business, Minority Business, and Agri-business groups. We also offer Business After Hours mixers and Power in Partnership breakfast meetings for all our Chamber members. If you are a new to our community, we welcome you with open arms!

The Chamber contracts with the Salisbury Post to produce this Directory. We are grateful to our community partners who have worked with them over the last several months to ensure the timely production and distribution of this publication. We especially appreciate the Chamber Member firms who advertise in this publication.

By using this Directory for business referrals, you can rest assured that you are doing business with companies that are the best in their industry and are good corporate citizens. Please contact the Chamber for any additional information, (704) 633-4221 or info@rowanchamber.com or rowanchamber.com

Rowan Chamber Celebrates 100th Anniversary!

by ELAINE SPALDING
Rowan Chamber President

The Rowan Chamber of Commerce's will celebrate its 100th anniversary in 2025. The Chamber was officially chartered in February 1925 and the first annual meeting was held on March 19, 1925. It began as the Salisbury Chamber of Commerce, the name was changed to Salisbury-Rowan Chamber of Commerce in 1960 and in 1995 to the Rowan County Chamber of Commerce to better reflect its county-wide service area.

The Chamber will celebrate at the 99th Annual Gala in January 2025 and will recognize long-term businesses all year long, culminating with the 100th Annual Gala in January 2026.

The Chambers first Annual Report shows support for bringing Catawba College to Salisbury; lobbying for better roads; and, work on establishing a "creamery" in the community. Early business leaders included: Sam Carter, President; L. S. Moody, Sec.; Ross Sigmon; J.O.

Draige; P.A. Wallenborn; S. H. Snider; Stahle Linn; C. L. Coggin; J. L. Fisher; J. F. Somer; J.V. Wallace; T. M. Hines; and, J. F. Hurley, Jr.

More recent accomplishments of the Chamber include business advocacy, workforce development, leadership development, transportation and education funding for the region. Some examples include: Rowan-Cabarrus Community College bond measures and truck driving road access funding; Rowan-Salisbury Schools renewal district support; Yadkin River Bridge; I-85 four lanes through Rowan County and the Old Beatty Ford Rd. exit in South Rowan; Rowan County Airport expansion; and, the development of the Paul E. Fisher Gateway Building.

Power In Partnership Breakfasts provide educational, networking opportunities

For more than a decade, the Rowan County Chamber of Commerce has hosted the Power In Partnership Breakfasts which have provided the community with multiple opportunities.

by KAREN KISTLER

The initial PIP breakfast meeting took place in September 2013 and has continued for more than 10 years with educational speakers and high-level networking opportunities.

The series kicks off in September and runs through May each year with an average of 120 people attending each month.

“Our Chamber members appreciate the opportunity to hear from nationally recognized speakers on timely topics,” Rowan County Chamber of Commerce President Elaine Spalding said. “It attracts the corporate level executives because they know it is an early morning event that lasts only one hour.”

Those who sponsor the breakfast are given the opportunity to speak for a few minutes about their business and then introduce the speaker. Plus, they have the exclusive marketing rights to the banquet room as their firm is the only one who can put materials on the tables and display their products and services, noted Spalding.

Sponsors have ranged from local businesses, community colleges and large corporations.

Novant Health Rowan Medical Center has served as a PIP sponsor and Gary Blabon, president of the healthcare facility, said he wanted to express what great work the Rowan County Chamber of Commerce does within the community.

“We are part of the community being the only public hospital in Rowan County, not to be confused with our wonderful VA,” Blabon said, “but it gives us an opportunity to tell our story. When we sponsor the breakfast, we usually have a healthcare speaker come in and give a talk.”

He said that these speakers can share anything related to the field including new procedures they are doing or new types of physicians or programs that they bring to the hospital.

And, he added, that it is “just a great time to network with other business leaders within the community.”

Dr. Carol Spalding, president of Rowan-Cabarrus Community College, said that for them, being able to serve as a sponsor for this chamber event “it helps this group understand our mission and know that we’re working together with so many people and inviting them to be one of our partners as well.”

Noting the quality of the community college and how hard they work to keep up with the future, which she said “we’re working really hard to make that happen” and they love to share with groups, large and small, about that and they want “people to understand about our mission and to support us and we appreciate it when they do.”

Additional benefits of attending these breakfast meetings could include, as Dr. Spalding said “there’s usually a speaker that brings some sort of perspective that we’re not involved in” as could be the case with others in attendance as well.

“So, I think the networking beforehand is really good with the people you want to talk to, you want to meet, so there’s that dimension to it,” she said.

These types of connections, Carol Spalding said, help with the effectiveness of one’s job.

“So, we want to stay in touch with the community and this is a great place to do that,” she said.

Blabon likewise shared about the programs, telling that “it’s always a great program” just like the one in November 2024 about AI, noting that they “very much use artificial intelligence within the hospital. And in my mind I was thinking about different areas that we use. But it’s always a good topic,” he said.

Plus he said the topics are ones that he would relate to personally or from a business standpoint.

Elected officials also attend the meetings, Carol Spalding said, noting that “know they are going to be approached by people who want things,” therefore, they want to be more in touch as well.

“So I think that’s the whole design of it and looking at what would be interesting, keeping ahead is something that we appreciate,” she said.

One group that attends the Chamber’s Power In Partnership Breakfasts is the Leadership Rowan Class, said Elaine Spalding.

They start their day at the breakfast, which is held at Trinity Oaks, and then venture out for each day’s session focused on a different aspect of the community. The Chamber previously had a program called “Friday Forum” that was incorporated into the PIP.

Members can purchase a Power Card at a discounted rate for frequent attendees, and this way, Spalding said, “they never have to worry about making a reservation.”

For more information about the breakfast series, contact the local chamber office by calling to 704-633-4221 or by emailing at info@rowanchamber.com.

Waterworks Visual Arts Center is located on Liberty Street and offers exhibits and classes for the community to enjoy. - Karen Kistler

‘We are one of the diamonds in the crown of Salisbury’

Waterworks Visual Arts Center has been a part of Salisbury’s Arts and Cultural community for decades having celebrated their 65th anniversary on April 1 of this year.

by KAREN KISTLER

The museum is located at 123 E. Liberty St., which they have called home since 2003. They were previously housed at 1 Water Street, which at one time served as the water department and county jail, said

Anne Scott Clement, executive director of Waterworks. She has been there since 2003 and has served as its director since 2007.

When the city took this building back over, she said they needed a new home; therefore, Paul Fisher, who had purchased what was the McCanless Motor Company building in the mid-90s along with other surrounding locations, donated the building to them. He then challenged them to raise the funds to renovate it, which they did through a capital campaign, and added two floors and some additional studio space.

Waterworks, which is a Nationally Accredited Art Museum, has five indoor professional galleries providing lots of exhibition space, as well as an outdoor sensory garden with sculpture pads in it.

Clement said they have some “permanent pieces and we have pieces that you see that are constantly on display throughout our public areas so that is considered our education collection” which were either donated by an artist or given as a gift to Waterworks.

A variety of exhibits can be seen at the museum, as artists submit proposals to show their work there and they also go out and seek artists to come and exhibit their artwork; thus providing opportunities for local, regional and international artists to have their work on display.

Exhibiting their work in an accredited museum “most often gets them a springboard to be able to show at other museums,” Clement said. “I love being able to get that emerging artist here that is really doing some incredible work and that we give them that opportunity to get their work out there for the public to see.”

Serving as the museum’s curator, Clement reviews the artwork, noting that there is also an exhibitions committee and they look at the work and discuss it and “see if it fits what we want to be doing that next year” as she said they plan 18 to 24 months ahead of time.

She said curating the artwork serves as her creative outlet and it’s fun to put the artwork together and come up with a theme for the exhibit.

The artists come first, after which the theme is selected as she puts the artists together who are going to show together, whether it is a group exhibit or a solo show, noting that “not everybody has a whole body of work that they are able to show.”

While she said they most often show living, contemporary artists, that is not the case with the exhibit they have now, with one being the modern Masterpieces, who for the most part are gone and an exhibit of photographs taken by the Smoots in the 1930s who are deceased.

The Masterpiece exhibit, which was loaned from the Robertson family, opened Sept. 17 and will remain through Aug. 30, 2025, allowing many people the chance to visit.

A normal year’s visitation, she said, is about 24,000. With the Masterpieces exhibit, they had more than 6,000 people attend, within 50 days of it being there.

“So we’re bringing a lot of economic impact into Salisbury, Rowan County already,” Clement said. “And we really want people to realize what a resource Waterworks is to our community, and we are free and open six days a week.

Plus, tours with all the Rowan County schools have been scheduled every day until school gets out in May.

“That’s our major goal is to have every school child come to see the show,” which she said would be approximately 20,000 children.

The ones that have visited the Masterpiece exhibit thus far have been awestruck, she said, including both the children and the adults.

This collection, which contains 40 pieces of work ranging from the late 19th century to the mid-20th century “is just extraordinary,” said Clement.

In addition to the exhibits, Waterworks Visual Arts Center offers classes for children and adults.

Classes for children begin at age 18 months with a Toddler Time, which she said is very active.

During the summer they devote time to ages four to 18 as they offer 25-30 classes each summer with a visiting artist residency for free for middle and high school students.

These students are nominated by their respective art teacher or the students have a passion for art and want to expand their horizons, as they are able to study under a professional artist for the week, said Clement.

Also during the summer they have an active student volunteer program, many having grown up coming to Waterworks, and they return as teenagers to volunteer their time and learn additional life skills as they are taught to be professional volunteers.

Adult programming takes place during the school year with classes offered in the spring, fall and winter. The favorite, she said for most adults, is the chance to get into the clay studio and do pottery.

Outreach partnerships with the community are also offered as they do a YMCA afterschool program and one titled Getting Bridges Through Art with Rowan Helping Ministries as well as collaborative efforts with the local colleges.

She said they also offer a program for every fifth grade student in Rowan County, whether public, private, independent or homeschool where the students come for what they art Fifth Grade Arts Stops.

The students come and receive a docent-led tour of the exhibitions and then participate in a hands-on related art activity in the center’s studio.

This program has been taking place since 2008 and is a partnership with the schools. Therefore, with every fifth grader in the county, that’s approximately 2200-2300 students, she said.

Salisbury is a very unique place, said Clement, “I think we are probably one of the best kept secrets in North Carolina, probably in the Southeast. And we have a strong art and cultural history here and whether they’re coming to Waterworks or they’re coming to the history museum or library or to the historic homes tour, whatever it is, when they come here, they’re just fascinated by what we have to offer here.”

Known to many outside of the Salisbury area, people take the train and come from the Raleigh, Durham and Chapel Hill areas or Charlotte and all over the place, she said.

“The accessibility is really important to us and we don’t want anybody to have any barrier to not be able to come here and experience what we have,” she noted.

Clement said that one of her favorite things to do is take someone on a tour of Waterworks that has never come in before and share what they are all about.

“I love showing it off because I think it’s something truly special,” said Clement. “We are just one of the many diamonds in the crown of Salisbury and we just have to be so grateful to the people back in the late 50s and early 60s that had this vision for Salisbury” as she mentioned the symphony, the art and history museums, the 11 historic districts, four performing art theaters and the colleges.

Spencer: The little town that could and did

by ELISABETH STRILLACCI

One of two small towns on the north side of Salisbury, Spencer started life as a railroad town, and it came into being in partnership with East Spencer next door, the other Rowan County town north of Salisbury.

The area got its name from railroad leader Samuel Spencer, who worked as a railroad advisor to J. P. Morgan, a wealthy New York banker. In 1894, Morgan agreed to finance the creation of Southern Railway if Spencer would serve as its president.

The railroad chose Washington, D.C., as its headquarters. The company needed a facility halfway on its main line between Washington and Atlanta to maintain and repair steam locomotives and rail cars. This new facility was rapidly built outside Salisbury, North Carolina, on open land and in wooded areas. Someone in the company suggested that the complex be named Spencer Shops, in honor of Samuel Spencer.

When a town for the white railroad workers and their families developed across the street and was incorporated in 1905, it seemed only natural that it would be named Spencer. Many Black workers and their families lived across the main line in an area that became the town of East Spencer.

An artistic rendering of the new Spencer Town Park. - Submitted

Over the years, the Spencer Shops became the North Carolina Transportation Museum, where many of the trains, and the lines and pieces of operation can still be seen, and the town continued to see small residential growth along with shops enough to sustain the population. But for a brief period, the town struggled to find its identity, behaving more as an offshoot of Salisbury at times than a community of its own.

During the last five years in particular, the town's leadership has refocused, with a town board and town manager that have been working to put together a team that is working to grow Spencer in a planned direction, with as much use of grant money as possible to bring out the advantages unique to Spencer.

Part of that is the town's situation alongside the Yadkin River, and the amount of forested parklike land that runs through the community.

One of the biggest projects, though it's been simmering on the back burner for more than a quarter century, is the Northern Rowan Connector Project. Town Manager Peter Franzese explained long ago that it was part of the county's greenway master planning project, but in the past, Spencer was unable to identify the town's share of matching funds for a substantial state grant to build it. The town has recently focused on advancing planning and design for the project while also seeking additional grants and donations to fund construction. The plan will be to connect Yadkin River Park spanning both sides of the river (Spencer's trailhead was completed last year) to downtown Spencer, the Stanback Educational Forest, and beyond towards Salisbury through a number of trails and sidewalks. The alignment is described as "from Yadkin River Park into downtown Spencer via Salisbury Ave./N.C. Highway 29; via Charles Street/Oakwood Drive/Whitehead Street past three schools; connecting to the Stanback Educational Forest trail system at the 7th Street Trailhead; and via the Grants Creek Greenway, eventually connecting to Salisbury's Greenway System west of Old Mocksville Road."

Many staff changes in recent years have been significant in getting and keeping the town on track in its pursuit of the trail system, with three part-time contract planners playing key roles. Steve Blount, a recently retired local magistrate and the town planner for Granite Quarry for five years, came on board in late 2021 as the Planning and Zoning administrator. Kyle Harris has provided planning services to the town through the Salisbury Community Development Corporation since early 2021, focused on historic preservation, events management, and CDBG housing rehabilitation. Joe Morris, who is retired from the City of Salisbury and served as interim town planner in 2019 and 2020, moved to special projects planner in 2021 to focus on grants, fundraising, and park construction.

Blount is a lifelong resident of Rowan County and has lived in Spencer for about 35 years. He served 12 years as a county commissioner, which pushed him to get into planning and earn a master's degree from UNC-Charlotte. He has always been a vocal advocate of long range planning. When he first came on board, his first effort was to revise the town's comprehensive plan for the future growth, and at the time, in 2022, he advised the town's board of aldermen about the incoming growth from commercial development from north and south of the town.

Since then, the town has indeed seen commercial growth, both along the I85 corridor with its neighbor, East Spencer, and in the downtown area, where plans implemented more than four years ago for the town to take back at least portions of Park Plaza have come to fruition. The town now owns a portion of the building, and both town hall and the police department are located at one end.

Former North Rowan player Javon Hargrave had his jersey retired and received a key to the cities of Spencer and East Spencer during a North Rowan girls' basketball game against Salisbury High. - Sean Meyers

The town recently broke ground in front of town hall to bring back a park in front of Park Plaza as well. Initially, the entire block that is now the Park Plaza was undeveloped woodlands, which was improved by the community in the 1920s at a cost of $6,000. The Four corners of the improved park were maintained by nearby church congregations until the property was sold for the development in the 1960s. In planning processes over the last 10 years, town leaders heard from the community that restoring a downtown civic park and investing in the underutilized shopping center were key priorities. After acquiring a third of the shopping center in 2019 and moving the town hall and police department to renovated space in 2021, the need for a park remained. Goals include creating a green space that will give community members an additional gathering place for events and recreation, give those visiting the transportation museum a place to perhaps enjoy a picnic or bring the children outside to play, and one day, the park will connect with the trail system.

And the town's goals to create that trail system continue to move forward. In October, the town voted to accept the most recent grant from the state for $100,000 from the Parks and Recreation Division of the Department of Natural and Cultural Resources. The grant, applied for through the Connecting Communities to State Trails, will be used for Spencer's Grants Creek Blueway, according to Morris.

"We qualified based on our proximity to Yadkin River, and our population is less than 5,000," said Morris, who wrote the grant application. The grant will allow the town to build a trail head with a gravel lot and trail down to Grants Creek where about 400 feet of land stream-side will become a canoe/kayak launch. Morris said boaters can then travel two and a half miles to connect to the Yadkin River, and then they can float down to York Hill on the Davidson County side of the Yadkin River Park. Morris said the grant does not require matching funds from the town.

Franzese said the town has received several cost estimates for the project, and while there will eventually be a competitive bidding process, those initial estimates indicate the grant should fully fund this particular project.

It is, however, just one piece of a larger project the town continues to work on. The town was deeded a parcel of 46.75 acres from Three Rivers Land Trust in 2023, that includes the northern portion along the Stanback Education Forest bringing the total area close to 100 acres. Morris said the town has submitted a grant application under the Great Trails State program that would allow for the development of 7,500 feet of trails within those 46 acres. It would be a trail that connects Spencer Avenue, Seventh Street, and surrounding neighborhood areas to Grants Creek.

Franzese and Morris said the town should hear if the grant has been given over the winter. The town applied for $460,000 in grant funds and there is already $230,000 available in matching funds, according to Morris. "We have some wonderful philanthropic contributors that have given us that much, so it would mean we would have $690,000 available in total," Morris said, and that would be in addition to the $100,000 the town just received.

Mayor Jonathan Williams praised Morris for his continued ability to seek and get grants for Spencer. "He always says 'the projects tell the story,' but he does an incredible job of putting the stories together," Williams said. "I'm so excited about this. It's another step in Spencer's efforts at a connected trail. We've been pushing for extensions and growth of blueways and greenways and this is part of that process."

Williams and the entire board of aldermen have continued to work to plan for the growth of Spencer, in terms of both creating a destination for visitors and in terms of making sure the residents' needs are met. The police department, under the leadership of Chief Michael File, is now nearly fully staffed as is the fire department, and the fire department just took delivery of a brand new truck, something Fire Chief Michael Lanning is thrilled about. Next on his agenda, though it will take time, will be a new fire station.

“Of course, there are always going to be areas where we need to continue to work,” said Williams and Franzese. They both note that residents have expressed concern about street paving and repair. “But unfortunately, there is not grant money for street paving the way there is for things like parks and greenways,” said Williams. The cost of repaving roads can be prohibitive at times, but both say they have a planned approach to repave and repair sections one piece at a time, just like most other towns and cities. Most recently, Salisbury Avenue, which is a state road, was repaved and relined to be a single lane in each direction, with a center turning lane, which has helped with the flow of traffic. Generous bike lanes were also added to help with additional connectivity options.

And Spencer made another step forward in independence this November. For the first time since about 1960, the town returned to having its own holiday parade. The Holiday Caravan began in Spencer in 1952, and in about 1959, it joined forces with Salisbury. This year, each town had its own holiday parade the day before Thanksgiving.

“It was just time for us to go out on our own,” said Williams. And the event was a tremen-

The annual Winterfest event takes place in December, and along with events at the museum and a number of other organizations that have ongoing activity, the community always has something to offer.

“We’ve developed a stronger sense of community than ever,” said Williams, “and we have every intention of continuing that growth and that connection. ●

Rowan County named one of the healthiest workplaces in the nation

Initiative does not end at the county office doors

by ROBERT SULLIVAN

The Rowan County government has been recognized multiple years in a row for being one of the healthiest workplace both locally and in the nation. The county has continued to reaffirm their commitment to health initiatives, and that commitment goes past the doors of the county office and into the wider community.

“We continue to receive recognition for innovation in employee health and wellness while remaining fiscally conservative. We are fortunate to have some of the brightest human resource professionals in the country under the leadership of Assistant County Manager Kelly Natoli,” said Rowan County Board of Commissioners Chairman Greg Edds.

The county was named in the top 5 Healthiest Employers of Greater Charlotte by the Charlotte Business Journal in the 500-999 employees category. This program was started by the Charlotte Business Journal in 2009 to celebrate companies that are putting their people first by investing in the health of their employees.

This is the fifth time the county has been recognized by the Charlotte Business Journal for making strides in wellness for workers. In 2024, the county ranked fourth, behind only the Cleveland County government, city of Gastonia and Truliant Federal Credit Union.

Rowan County has also been recognized in the 2024 Healthiest 100 Workplaces in America by Springbuk, an awards program created to honor people-first organizations that prioritize the well-being of their employee population. This is the second time Rowan County has been recognized by Springbuk because of our commitment to workplace wellness. Springbuk is a health intelligence software platform that administers the awards program across the country to honor the nation’s employers most dedicated to bettering their worksite health and wellness programs.

“We are very proud of the Rowan County Wellness Committee and the Human Resources Department for their commitment to help employees build healthy physical habits, as well as the support they provide to employees for open communication about mental health,” Assistant County Manager and Human Resources Director Kelly Natoli said.

In 2024, the county was ranked 99th. Award winners included nationally recognized companies such as BP North America, St. Jude Children’s Hospital, CVS Health, American Express and NASCAR.

“Rowan has a proactive employee supportive board of commissioners who have supported numerous initiatives over the last decade including a diabetes management program, a medical weight loss program, biometric screening incentives, discounted premiums for participation in the wellness program, Fitbits, a fitness app with monthly incentives, mobile mammograms, flu shot clinics, a free on-site Nurse Practitioner and an Employee Assistance Program with enhanced services to support mental wellness,” said Natoli.

That support for health initiatives extends beyond the county offices on Innes Street, as Rowan County has recently provided strong support for expanding the health department’s available space as well as local initiatives such as the Behavioral Health Urgent Care, which was spearheaded by the Rowan County United Way and Daymark Recovery Services. The county government provided $1.5 million for the initiative, with the N.C. Department of Health and Human Services providing the same amount. The BHUC will provide 24/7 care to anyone suffering from a behavioral health crisis or simply needing help outside of normal workday hours.

“I know that’s what you’re going to build here, a place where people feel comfortable. A place where any of you would be fine taking your mother or taking your 13-year-old child. That’s what we want to build in communities because it’s normal and it’s needed,” said NC-DHHS Director of Mental Health, Developmental Disabilities and Substance Use Services Kelly Crosbie during an event announcing the BHUC in August of 2024.

During the economic incentives process, when the county decides whether to offer tax incentives to large companies exploring moving to the area, the county government also places an emphasis on companies that offer health insurance and pay at least half of the monthly premiums. The premiums are worth a point under the county’s scoring policy, which is equivalent to $50 million in capital investment or the creation of 51 jobs. ●

Rowan County’s economy continues to grow

County moves up job opportunity and population growth rankings year after year

by ROBERT SULLIVAN

Just four years ago, Rowan County was hit hard by the COVID-19 pandemic, leading the N.C. Department of Commerce to place it among the most economically-distressed counties in the state. Four years later, the county has moved back up in the state’s tier system by continuing to bring new employment opportunities, which in turn drove down unemployment rates and drove up population growth.

That growth has continued through 2024, as dozens of large-, medium- and small-scale businesses and development companies chose to expand into the county.

One of the most-praised expansions during the past year was Amrep, a company that had already been present in the community for years. Amrep moved into Rowan County in 2017, and announced midway through 2024 that it would be bringing close to 200 jobs to the area by building an 82,000-square-foot expansion, doubling its physical footprint and more than quadrupling its employee count.

"When you've got a company that comes here and we do what we say we're going to do, we take care of those folks and they like our employees, they like our community. When they come back a second time, that says volumes about our community. When folks like Amrep come back and they spend a whole lot more than they spent the first time, that is a real tribute to the community," said Rowan County Board of Commissioners Chairman Greg Edds when the expansion was announced.

Multiple company representatives along with local and state officials have said that the county's location plays a large part in its attractiveness, with

Rowan County being centrally located between Winston-Salem, Greensboro and Charlotte while also being connected to all three by the interstate.

"This region of the state is growing thanks to its wonderful location with the interstate being connected to the state's transportation network, a wonderful business climate and excellent quality of life. Much of this is attributed to the investments that Rowan County continues to make in this community as it provides a great place to live, work and play," said Chief Deputy Secretary of the N.C. Department of Commerce Jordan Whichard.

The area also had a hit on a long-term development project, as the county commissioners approved incentives in November for a company looking to expand into the Rusher Farms Commerce Center in East Spencer.

The company, known only as Project Secure while they contemplate their options, is an internationally-known manufacturer that has been in its industry since the 1930s and is looking to bring 29 jobs and over $1 million in investments to the area. Scott Shelton, Rowan EDC Vice-President, has said that the company will pay salaries higher than the local manufacturing average as well as providing health insurance and contributing to the premiums.

Rusher Farms is one of two recent developments where developers have said that the community's commitment to each other and to improving the economic situation was a contributing factor to their decision to move to the area, with the other being Carlton Farms Industrial Park in northern Rowan County. Both developments retain the names of the families that lived on the land for generations before selling it to benefit their communities.

It was "very important to develop in a way to reflect who the family is. This will always be the Carlton family land, so it's very important to us to give them that legacy and so we did it by branding them Carlton Farms to honor them," said John Barker Jr., development director of Red Rock Developments, the lead developer for Carlton Farms.

As developments such as Carlton Farms and Rusher Farms see their visions play out, the county's rise in North Carolina economy rankings will continue to improve, as companies continue to offer more employment opportunities and the county government prioritizes companies such as Project Secure that offer higher than average salaries and benefits packages. ●

Home for Life Design: Transforming Homes & Lives

by SYDNEY MURPHY
Rowan Chamber Staff

(Note: Last year, the Rowan Chamber and the City of Salisbury presented six small business grants to help encourage and support local businesses. This is one of the recipients.)

Imagine returning to your home after a life-changing injury, only to find that the place meant to offer you comfort and security now feels like a series of obstacles. This is a reality that Home for Life Design is determined to change.

Founded by Carolyn Sithong, Home for Life Design is a revolutionary, data-driven home assessment tool that measures the safety and accessibility of each room in the home and provides recommendations that will eliminate barriers to home safety.

“The assessment is a SaaS (Software as a Service) and is used by service providers who work in the homes of individuals who are aging or disabled,” said Sithong.

The result is a life-changing experience for clients, families, and their care teams.

“Healthcare is good at diagnosing a person to determine how healthy they are, but they are not so good at diagnosing a home. Home is a social determinant of health. If you cannot do the activities of daily living, your health becomes compromised,” said Sithong.

By diagnosing the home, Home for Life Design ensures that physical barriers, like steps, stairs, or tub showers, do not become sources of disability. Instead, these barriers can be replaced to enhance health, safety, and participation in daily life.

The inspiration behind Home for Life Design stems from Sithong’s personal experience as an occupational therapist.

“I saw many persons who, after suffering a catastrophic injury, return home only to feel more disabled. The home environment does one of two things — it enables function or disables function,” said Sithong.

This realization led to the creation of a tool that would help transform homes into spaces that empower their inhabitants.

What sets Home for Life Design apart from others in the industry is its sophisticated approach to home assessments.

“Most home assessment processes offered by home health companies or home improvement service providers are not standard, antiquated, and are usually as sophisticated as ‘remove the throw rug,’ said

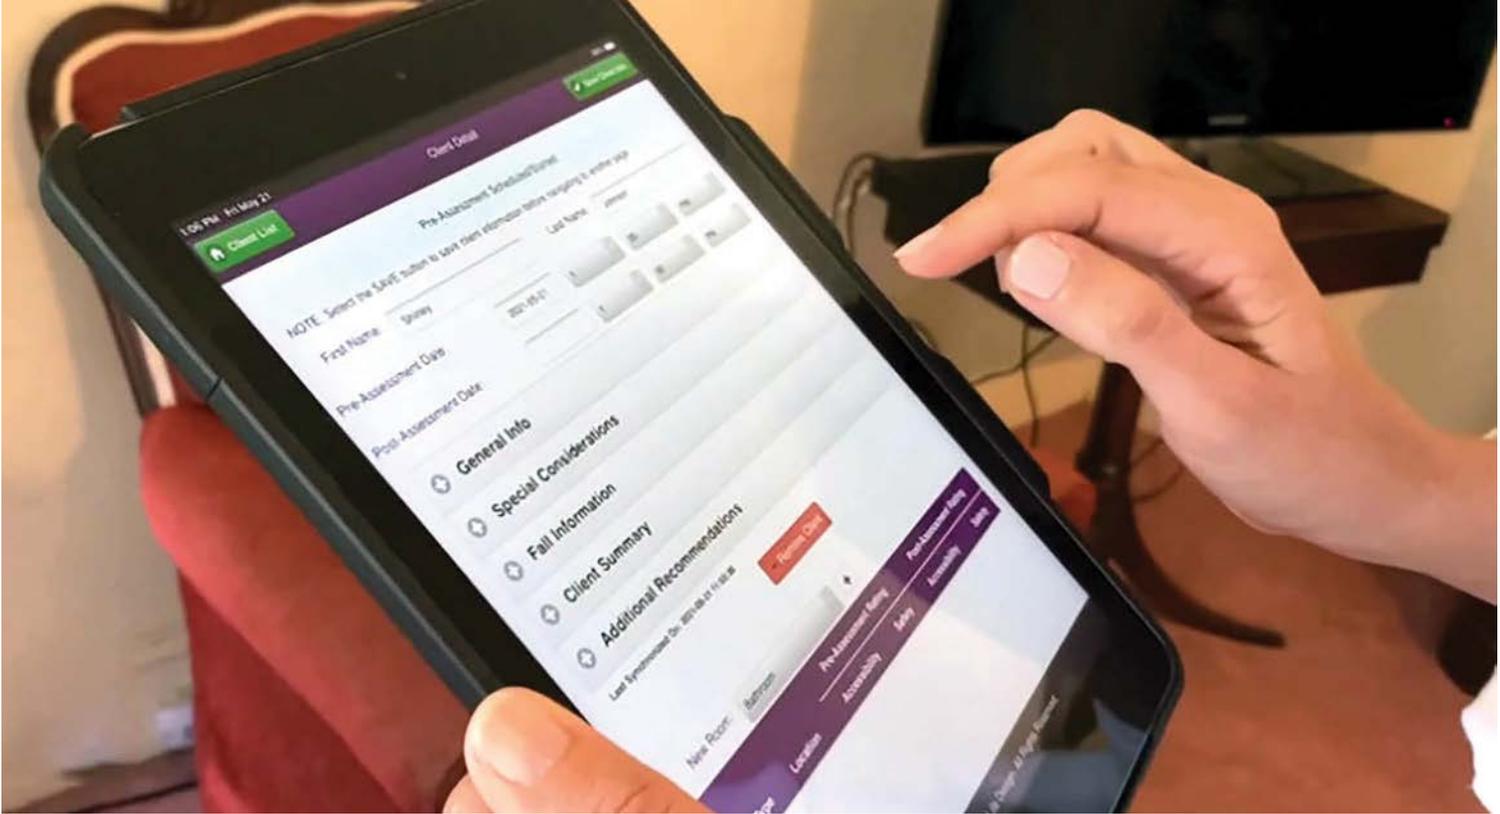

Sithong. “Our technology measures the impact the home has on health with safety and accessibility metrics and also provides the home modification solutions that can increase those numbers. We create homes that work now and later,” she added.

Thinking about her company’s long-term goals, Sithong hopes that Home for Life Design will become the gold standard for measuring the health of homes across the lifespan.

“We are eliminating disability, one home at a time with our technology, and are making a huge impact by helping to reduce falls, avoid unnecessary institutionalization among the aging and disabled, and saving healthcare costs,” she said.

But, the company’s vision extends beyond individual homes. Sithong also hopes Home for Life Design will create jobs and support local service providers in Rowan County, contributing to a healthier, more accessible community for all.

For aspiring entrepreneurs, Sithong offers this piece of advice: “If you have a fire, feed the fire. It is there, created and placed in your heart for your individual talents and gifts. Good will always come from moving towards your dream, so never be afraid to take that first step.”

Home for Life Design software enables seniors to stay in their home safely

Home for Life Design is more than just a business — it’s a mission to transform homes and improve lives. For more information, visit HomeforLifeDesign.com.

East Spencer finds its footing

The community that started as the residential area for Black employees at the Southern Railroad Company in Spencer has always been that - a residential community.

But its history of families, of generations of families, has held strong.

Several companies have come into town over the years to provide some support to the residential tax base, but others have fallen away, and for a time, the community struggled to find its rhythm.

But in recent years, it has begun gaining strength in growth, and civic pride as resurged.

Less than five years ago, the board of aldermen voted to shift to the town manager/city council form of government, giving the town manager the responsibility of implementing the policies and plans the aldermen vote to put in place. At the time, the goal was to free up aldermen to govern by leaving the day-to-day work to the manager and staff.

Town Manager Michael Douglas has worked tirelessly not only to make that happen, but to address particular issues the town needed to focus on.

He and the board have worked with developers to come to East Spencer, both residential and commercial. Several housing developments have either begun or are on the books, and a number of single family homes and smaller developments have already been constructed.

A new industrial center, which sits on an 80-acre parcel on Andrews Street just around the curve from exit 79 on I-85, is taking shape, with the buildings themselves now up. The center is being developed by Halstatt Real Estate Partners and Tectonic. Called the Rusher Farms Industrial Complex as a nod to the former owners, there is currently a tenant for building A, though it has not yet been named. And a new Sheetz is expected to break ground soon.

In addition, two other residential developments are in the planning phase. There is the proposed construction of 60 homes in the proposed McCanless Village for which smaller setback requirements have been approved in order to allow for slightly larger homes, and there are plans for the possible construction of about 200 townhomes on a parcel in town.

Most importantly, the town has worked to address what are termed "nuisance properties," or parcels where the owners have let the property fall below code requirements.

"The town is in a growth phase, and we are just not going to tolerate that anymore," said Douglas. The town has received some grant money to help owners with rehabilitation and those projects are nearing completion, he said, but owners who need help should reach out to the town for direction and guidance.

"We're here to help, but we just can't ignore blighted properties," said Douglas. One of those properties is the former Dunbar School on Long Street. The former school marked a tremendous part of history for the community, but over time, the building has fallen into tremendous disrepair, and following a fire in 2014, the owners had been unable to complete any of the planned projects. The town paid for some cleanup a year ago, including removing the burned portions, and placed a lien on the property.

The structure has a long and storied history in the town. Initially built as a one-room school house in 1900, the property was first called East Spencer Negro School. Several rooms were added as the student body grew. In 1921, it had a growth spurt, going from eight rooms to a new, 11-room classroom structure with an auditorium, library, office, lunchroom and a basement. In 1958, it was renamed Dunbar High School after Paul Laurence Dunbar, one of the first Black poets to gain national recognition and who was published by the age of 14.

A decade later, the school was both integrated and renamed, this time as North Rowan Middle School. But by the 1990s, the school was well past its glory days, and it took a group of residents to prevent demolition of part of the campus in order to create an alternative school. In 1995, still owned by the school system, the facility returned to its honorary name and became the Paul Laurence Dunbar Center, housing both school and public offices and private entities.

At the end of December 2014, parts of the facility were destroyed by a five-alarm fire that required dozens of firefighters to control. However, some of the structure that was not damaged continued to be used until 2000, when it was clear more of the building had fallen into disrepair. The school system put the property on the market in 2004, and in 2006, it was purchased by New Unity Rising LLC out of Washington, D.C. In 2008, it was again sold, this time to Shady Grove Baptist Church. The Dunbar Center, valued at $600,000 at the time of its dedication in 1958 had an assessed value of $257,627 at the time of the 2008 sale. The property was later purchased by an investment group called the Paul L Dunbar Group or PDLG, made up of private investors. Since then, none of the proposals from PDLG have come to fruition, and the future of the site remains a question mark.

Another historic piece of the town's past was lost in a massive fire two years ago, when the former Rowan County School Administration building across from the town hall burned. However, the back buildings were untouched, and a possible development of the property remains under discussion.

There are positive plans for the town outside of those structures as well. There is a goal of creating, down the road, a larger, more efficient town government structure that would include the town hall, the police department, and the post office. Currently the town government and the police department work out of the same structure and the post office is two doors down, with the fire department in between.

A new structure with access to all three departments, with updated space and technology, would benefit the community as a whole, according to town leaders, but they are also aware it needs to fit the town's budget.

The new addition of commercial businesses will help address that, as they will begin to help offset the taxes that for years have been carried primarily by residential taxes.

Douglas said he is aware that more buildings mean more services which cost more money, but in the end, it still puts less weight on the residents.

Mayor Barbara Mallett has been a fixture in East Spencer forever, it seems, and her love for her community is obvious. But she is also driven to make decisions that best affect the community, and she is proud of the strides the town has made in recent years.

"We have been so fortunate to receive the grant money we have in recent years," she said recently. The town has received CDBG money for repairs to houses, and a tremendous grant to repair and improve water and sewer lines. "Michael [Douglas] has done an incredible job helping the town find money from other sources to get things done."

And as the town grows, it adds to its leadership team. The town has recently hired its first finance director, Ashley McFarland, and she said part of her job "will be to explore additional grant funds" for future projects, as well as getting the town's books in order for a standard audit. Those jobs had moved from the aldermen to Douglas, but as the town grows, the need for specific department leaders will also grow.

"It's one step at a time," said Douglas, "but the potential is absolutely there, and I think we are on a good track." ●

Segregated Cleveland schoolhouse offers potential as community hub

Work continues in the western Rowan County town of Cleveland to transform a formerly segregated school for Black students into a multi-purpose community center.

by CHANDLER INIONS

Back in August 2024, two representatives from The Cannon Foundation visited Cleveland, joining various town officials and figures to discuss a grant application being submitted to revitalize the R.A.

Clement School into a destination for programming, gatherings and other activities.

Cannon Foundation Executive Director Suzanne Philemon and Program Officer Candice Kane joined a slew of Cleveland locals from the West Rowan Neighborhood Center Advisory Council and R.A. Clement Alumni Association at the former Rosenwald school. In true Cleveland fashion, they were greeted with a smile and some refreshments.

The former all-Black school currently operates as a community center but needed infrastructure repairs and a general lack of awareness prevent it from fulfilling the town's vision of what it could be.

"This is very much part of our community, but I will say from being on the board all the years, a neglected part of our community," Mayor Pat Phifer said of the old school building.

Joining Phifer and The Cannon Foundation officials were Commissioner Jeanette Rankin, Finance Officer Rebekah Newsome, consultant Christine Brown-Aumen, contractor Charles Barber and various council and alumni association members, including Leonard Hall, Darryl Hall, Vera Avery, Lonnie Gaither and Ernestine Avery Cornelius.

Avery, who attended R.A. Clement School as a child, offered a memory of what the space meant to the community back then.

"We were here all the time," Avery said. "And then as the building became a little bit, you know, had more needs to it, and it became in disrepair. We got away from that. And so now we just want to bring it back to what it was. I mean, that's the theme of this building, is re-opening the door to our legacy, but we want to expand that to the entire community."

Visions for the space, which is located on Krider Street near Cleveland's park and centralized downtown, feature plans for health screenings, workforce training and development and senior activities in addition to its service as a community center.

With the Cleveland-based organizations preparing to submit a grant application to The Cannon Foundation, Philemon and Kane wanted to meet with them to unpack the town's needs.

"You talked about connectivity, walkability, yes, I know that when we talk with some other organizations, Cleveland has identified some other indicators that there are some needs," Kane said. "And I think it would be really great to talk about health care, food insecurities and monthly food banks."

While the project features many components, Leonard Hall said the first thing they want to do is finish the window restoration and insulation. The building is in need of a new HVAC system as well, but the council members don't want to upgrade that system until the building is better climate controlled.

"Some of the windows are in pretty good shape, but some of them, the joints are coming loose, and it's just, you're trying to keep the air in, and the air's coming from outside," he said.

Kane explained that tacking down those costs is an important element of the grant application.

"I think what would be helpful is to know what it is going to take for the finishing of the windows," Kane said. "What do you need for all the insulation and then one unit for the HVAC? Knowing what that looks like, I think we can then take that to our boards because there's an opportunity where we can have more than one fund take a look at grant assistance."

The Cannon Foundation pulls funding from multiple trusts. Kane indicated that based on the nature of this project, they would most likely pull from the Mariam and Robert Hayes Charitable Trust.

"This request is primarily being looked at by our Hayes trust," Kane said. "We do have the foundation that covers the entire state, so that's why I really wanted Suzanne (Philemon) here today to hear more about Cleveland and the needs of this community."

"There's an opportunity where more than one fund could consider this request to help you push this along. So knowing your true snapshot of needs for this part of the facility space is really helpful for us."

Kane also mentioned that one style of transformation they see as being successful is creating a multi-purpose space.

"I think it's really reassuring to hear y'all say collectively that you're identifying spaces if we're talking specifically about this facility, identifying spaces that can be used for multi-purpose," she said. "We're seeing that churches are now being repurposed in ways we've talked about, too, right? How can you bring nonprofits to this area to serve you?"

"It's really helpful whenever we can find an organization that is really trying to serve the human need. You all have a very unique story in Cleveland. That's connectivity, it's walkability, it's being outside in a safe space. You can let your kids out and run. But it's also to serve those health needs of the community as well because you do have a vast generation range."

Cleveland's local and official representatives just want to recreate a space steeped in history to serve as a destination for whatever community outreach or engagement activities might make use of the town's unique location. It is within shooting distance of several high-population areas, but as a geographic location, western Rowan County also has a large population. As the unofficial center of that region of the county, Cleveland just makes sense as the logical location to create that shared community space at the R.A. Clement School. ●

All aboard. Abby and I set off on the train for an overnight stay in Greensboro. The Amtrak station in Salisbury puts so many destinations within reach.

A move worth making

by CHANDLER INIONS

Towards the end of 2022, my then-girlfriend and I packed up our lives and moved to Salisbury. We came from Nashville in two small cars, so loaded to the gills with the items we could not leave behind that merging lanes was more an act of faith than a simple traffic maneuver.

Ironically, it was Halloween, but what frightened me the most were not ghouls or ghosts, but rather the guesswork that comes prepackaged when you start over.

I'd worked for a newspaper in Tennessee called the Lebanon Democrat. Lebanon was not so unlike Salisbury. A town of about 40,000 people maybe 30 minutes outside of a major American city. As I am sure it is with any profession, saying goodbye to those you work with, can be difficult. The difference when you are a community newspaper reporter is that your coworkers are the whole town.

Cushioning against that discomfort was the promise of possibilities. The Salisbury Post presented a great chance for me. In Tennessee, I covered the "anything and everything" beat. Here, I was going to be able to focus on education.

Ernie doesn't mind plugging away at the office.

Taking that specialization step is something every general assignment reporter hopes to do.

From everything I could tell, a notion that has yet to be dispelled, the Salisbury Post offered a strong newsroom, with various personalities and perspectives working together to bring you the news. My job has proven more than gratifying. I've got wonderful co-workers and the company has allowed me to take additional career steps, from beat reporter to editor in chief.

But work is only something you do part of the time. What of the rest of the life I left behind? Abby and I are frequent flyers at live musical performances. It was one of the things that made Nashville such a perfect location for us. What would Salisbury have to offer?

I'm happy to report that I think I actually started seeing more live music when I got to Salisbury. Local watering holes offered unlikely venues that became staples for my viewing pleasure. I don't have the official statistics but I'd venture a guess I was present for more jam minutes in 2023 than I was in 2022.

There's a lot more to a place than just where they can catch a show. What about good places to eat? We've found so many spots that welcome us with receptive arms. Date nights really became nights on the town in a way that stamped each memory with a novel tone. We count our blessings every time we go out to live in a place with so much to choose from.

If daytime activity is more your thing, we have a dog named Ernie that loves getting out and about. He's fond of trails, urban or rural, and he's partial to new scents.

That then-girlfriend I mentioned earlier has since become my wife. We tied the knot downtown at the Historic Train Depot, etching our story into the timeless tapestry this place has to offer. We love it here and are so sure it's where we want to be that we set down roots, buying a home in Spencer.

The neighborhood is warm and friendly. Our evening strolls take us up to one of our local eateries there or sometimes just around the block, but it's always blissful — every step a delight.

Being here has opened the doors to new friends and new opportunities. I still remember that morning in Tennessee, wondering if we were making the right decision. Two years in, I can say with certainty, that it's been the best move I've ever made. ●

Relocating to Rowan County

Rowan County has it all – spacious farms, historic homes with plenty of charm, new neighborhoods with all the amenities.

Your Chamber Business Directory lists local real estate agencies who will be happy to assist you in finding your dream home.

For now, here are a few simple trips you can make by car or on foot to start learning about Rowan’s communities.

Farms and fields abound in and around Rockwell and Cleveland as well as to the north near the Woodleaf community.

Try this excursion: from Salisbury, take Statesville Boulevard (U.S. 70) west toward Cleveland. Turn left onto NC 801 South and go south to Sherrill’s Ford Road. Turn left there to head back toward Salisbury. This loop takes you through some of Rowan’s prime farm country.

High Rock Lake is a reservoir lake located in Davidson and Rowan counties of North Carolina, serving as a boundary between them. It is a reservoir for hydroelectric power generation. It is the northernmost of the Uwharrie Lakes and the second largest lake in North Carolina behind Lake Norman. Its water surface covers 15,180 acres (61 km<sup>2</sup>) and there are 365 miles (587 km) of shoreline. It begins at the confluence of the Yadkin River and the South Yadkin River. The lake’s name is derived from neighboring “High Rock Mountain”, the tallest mountain in the Uwharrie Mountains. High Rock Lake is currently managed and operated by the Cube-Hydro.

History is alive in Salisbury’s downtown historic district. Homes from the 19th and early 20th centuries, many with a story to tell, line the streets within a block or two of the city center.

From the intersection of Main and Innes, take West Innes Street past the Rowan County offices. Go three blocks, then turn left onto South Ellis Street. Make your way down this street, then turn left on West Monroe Street. At the next block, turn left onto South Fulton Street to make your way back to Innes Street.

These streets close to Main Street feature historic homes as well as more recent houses with character.

Find your hometown

Most of Rowan’s smaller municipalities retain a small-town character — local businesses, close-knit neighborhoods and plenty of smiling faces. Most of what you’ve heard about “Southern hospitality” is true and you can expect to get smiles and waves as you introduce yourself to the locals.

Every town has something different to offer, as well as a blend of old and new homes and neighborhoods. Pick a corner of the Rowan County map and go exploring. You just might find your new friends and neighbors waiting for you there.

live purposefully

This is what life is supposed to feel like. When you aren't held back. When you have a health partner that doesn't just treat part of you – they care for all of you. That's why more people prefer Atrium Health, with the most complete care that lets you get back to the moments that matter. That's what it's like to live fully.

Atrium Health
